FOOTVILLE MAN DIES IN BELLOT HOSPITAL

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Footville, March 26.—Friends in this town were shocked to learn of the death of James Andrew Hall, which occurred at the hospital in Beloit Friday night at ten o'clock, after an illness of but ten days from pneumonia. His death was made doubly sad because of the recent date of his marriage. He was wed to Mrs. Hattie Gerung on December thirtieth, last. Mr. Hall was born in Medon, Tennessee, in 1876, and had seen some years of service with the regular army.

He was a most popular man in this vicinity and it is only with deep regret that the news of his untimely death travels through the neighborhood.

Mr. Hall is survived by his widow and by one sister, living in Tennessee. The body was brought to Footville Sunday night and taken to the home of his wife's mother, Mrs. Palmer. The funeral was held at eleven o'clock this morning from the Methodist Episcopal church. Interment was made in the cemetery. The pallbearers were Peter, Edward and Forest Palmer and Willard Genung.

BRITISH MERCHANT SAILORS COMPLAIN ABOUT WAGES.

Buenos Aires, March 25.—British merchant sailors who visit this port are beginning to grow seriously about their pay. The Herald recently published an article signed "The Purser" which said in part: "Many officers and men in the British merchant service feel deep about the wages they receive. There must be something inherently unfair in a state of things that drives up the capital value of the ships wherein they serve, to fabulous heights, while the wages of the men who are the super-taxation of war profits cannot reduce to normal dimensions and which leaves salaries more or less where it found them. It is gall and wormwood to them."

DIVORCE GOVERNMENT AND SALOONS URGES EX-GOVERNOR HANLY

NATION'S DESTINY DEPENDS ON SEPARATING GOVERNMENT AS PARTNER WITH LIQUOR INTERESTS.

WILL END CORRUPTION

Graft Scandals Will Go When Prohibition Arrives.—Belittles License Fund Contribution to City Budget.

The leader of all the "drys" spoke in Janesville Sunday afternoon in the interests of lining up Janesville in the rapidly lengthening prohibition procession of the United States senate, session. J. Frank Hanly, of Indiana, a former governor, a former prohibition candidate for president in 1916, and a lifelong worker to down the liquor evil, was the speaker. The greatest "dry" audience which has greeted a prohibition speaker in the present campaign heard him from the opera house rostrum. Six hundred and fifty people, three-fourths of whom were voters, attended. "Dry" forces, observing in the gathering many previously behind and listed as "wet" advocates, argued it assured good for the city license cause.

The honorable Mr. Hanly discussed the liquor traffic from national, state and community angles. His discourse stripped to the bone the vital issue of the prohibition movement. He demanded a rising to the sublime occasion which once in the life of every generation presents itself. "The eternal destiny of the United States rests," he declared, upon a divorcing of the partners, the liquor interests and the government.

Pay $200,000,000 for $20,000. Getting down to local matters, Mr. Hanly told his audience that Janesville gets $20,000 annually from the saloons.

"I like to see our American schools divorced from these unholy things," he said. "These insidious suppositions you voters are both sound and fool that you ought to retain this $20,000 for one dollar and fifty cents, and that's the pro rata share of this traffic's revenue in the city of Janesville. Are you fool enough to stand for a dollar and fifty cents between you? You pay this $20,000 and you pay $200,000 more."

Janesville had better go down into its pockets for these and fifty cents and do away with this $20,000 revenue to save a part of their $200,000. This community can well afford to do it.

"I am touching another angle of the economic phase of the movement. He derided the business man and business interests who feared a general vacation of store quarters, and the bar and saloons be bankrupted, lower rents and a diminishing of trade. In the throwing out of the saloon he saw even greater prosperity than that steady trend of prosperity and average good business conditions Janesville has always experienced, even in times of dire business and panic throughout the nation, and he said:

"Close the saloons all up today and your community will produce more in the first year of your being in the 'dry' column than it did in the last two years of your being in the 'wet'."

"You'll have more sober men and you'll have more trend towards law and order. And your one dollar bills in the registers of the Janesville merchants will do more good than they will in the cash tills of the Milwaukee brewers."

"Others have banished the liquor evil and they have all risen to a greater degree of prosperity."

Discuss Moral Issue.

"The moral issues he discussed were deep and profound. Chicago graft scandals and the recent octopus-like expose at Terre Haute and Indianapolis were those which received his greatest attention and from which were drawn the lessons to be branded deep in the minds of his hearers in the effort to bring them to the aid of those movements which he intimates would forestall all interference in the future with national, state and community government.

"Way, even with government has this business sought to interfere," he said. "Nearby, in Chicago, you have only just witnessed the great graft case indictments, for the selling of immunity to this traffic.

"In my own state, in Terre Haute, what have you. The mayor in the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth. The city judge is with him. So is the comptroller and the superintendent in the city police, and with them all in Leavenworth are the judge of the circuit court and one hundred and fourteen others. Government is at the dividing point—not only in the state of Indiana but in every other state as well."

"Alcohol is the king of all anarchy, the lord of all misrule. Why, it is even writing platforms. It has wormed its wicked way deep into the hearts of all politics.

"Why man, the saloons will have to go for the reason that the American people cannot tolerate it for the fear of poor government.

"You are told in Janesville that if you declare your town 'dry' you will lose the spoils of the office. This is the blind pig. Here you have the truth in that this business says to you, 'If I win I'll have all the spoils of the office, but if you win you'll have none of your spoils for I'll take them away from you.'"

"But I tell you these men will not operate long. Conditions for the first time will be such, perhaps, but above you and above your state there is the federal government. And it will send in men who will stop this traffic."

Sees National Prohibition.

In the recent "bone dry" law the speaker found much delight. In recent rulings of the Interstate Commerce commission he also found much to delight in. He spoke of the nation into the family spreading its members through the universe and degrading liquor, as Russia so recently has done.

"The question from the widest viewpoint possible, Mr. Hanly declared that 'eternal laws of communities make men and nations what they are. The children reap in the whirlwind. The American nation for four long years of the civil war reaped what it sowed because the drawers of the Declaration of Independence declared man's equality before God failed to declare man's equality before man."

"They gave the constitution recognition to the right of one man to his flesh and blood but they denied it to another."

"These men were great enough to abolish racial slavery, but they were too weak to stop the constitutional right of the beverage liquor traffic. And we, their children, live to reap their whirlwind after sixty years. What are you going to do about it? What reaping will you leave for your children?"

THREE BICYCLE RIDERS ARE BROUGHT INTO COURT: TWO ACTIONS ARE DISMISSED

Three youthful bike riders were before Judge Maxfield this morning for city ordinance violating in appropriating sidewalks for speeding. Because two of them were practically the sole supporters of their families they were dismissed when the court was apprised of conditions.

It is a fact that Jess Ebert that he has several brothers and sisters who can help along with the family expenses. He had to pay for a bicycle and costs. Those actions dismissed were against Walter Swanson and Carl Demrow.

CHICAGO MARKETS.

Chicago, March 26.—Receipts of hogs Saturday were a third below expectation. Prices steady to 5c higher. Quality poor, with best at $15.15. Week's average price of hogs at $15.15, highest on record and $8.25 above weight of swine last week 211 lbs. heaviest since last October—against 221 lbs. a year ago.

Closing cattle market weak, with big advance early in week lost. Good beef cattle, however, averaged $11.80 for the week, a new high record.

Today's receipts are estimated at 17,000 cattle, 42,000 hogs and 13,000 sheep, against 15,000, 40,000 and 12,000, respectively, a week ago. Next week's estimated receipts 44,000 cattle, 50 lbs. dockage per head.

Probable hog receipts for Monday are estimated at 35,000 to 50,000.

Cattle Close Dull.

Barring choice grades of steers, fat cattle market closed with all the early week's advance lost. Butcher cattle were finished weak, and calves were $1 higher than a week ago. Quotations: High grade to fancy steers... $12.35 to 12.55. Poor to choice steers... 9.60 to 12.10. Yearlings, fair to fancy... 9.25 to 10.75. Fat cows and heifers... 7.50 to 7.70. ### VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor:

Yesterday, one of many, I listened with rapid attention to the masterful address delivered by ex-Governor Hanly on the greatest issue of the day, but it is not the speech I would speak, but the audience and those who should have been in the audience. The audience was a highly intelligent one, appreciative, and even enthusiastic, but Janesville's business and professional men and its so-called 400 were conspicuous by their absence. Why the reason? Was it because of indifference, timidity or hostility? Surely not the last, for we can hardly conceive of such a feeling being cherished so inimical to the welfare of Janesville and humanity. Were I a businessman in Janesville, possibly I would be fearful of results like they, but if I were, I would pray God to give me more courage and loyalty to righteousness. At the safe distance of seven miles, with my investments in an independent business, I have no fear to speak boldly of conditions apparently prevailing. To speak bluntly, a good portion of the people of Janesville are in the thrall of the liquor traffic. They are constrained to abdicate the right of self-government, bought with the blood of their ancestors, and are so much and read much of "standards" behind the president and I would not deprecate in the least, but unless physical courage becomes much more in evidence than moral courage now is, the Janesville condition would be so far behind the times that it could not be discerned by a German field glass.

I am told that a leading business house cautioned its employees not to count themselves in any way in the movement for a dry Janesville, the penalty of disobedience not being stated, but easily inferred. Whether this must cause every liberty loving person who has knowledge of it to wonder if our much vaunted freedom is a real and tangible thing or is a mere "bridgehead dream," thing or is a familiar with the slogan "Buy It In Janesville." We presume that refers principally to the necessities of life, but some of the apparent attitude of judging from the apparent attitude of buying your liquor poison and distilled damnation in Janesville. If they are not interested enough to manifest their interest in making their city a safe and clean place for its citizens to rear their families, and the adjacent farmers to visit with their wives and children, and to educate the latter, then they can have no cause for complaint if the discriminating citizen and farmer sends part of his trade elsewhere.

What have you to fear, O business man of Janesville? Can you not see the signs of the times? Will you ride on the crest of the prohibition wave, or will you let it engulf you? The fight is on! The home against the saloon. Law against anarchy! Righteousness against Satan! (Get on the right and popular side of the greatest economic, moral and political issue of the day. Do it quick, and "get there with both feet." Janesville and the

The Daily Novelette

STAMP AND ALL.

Pinro X Jam, the highbrow novelist, the dashing one of the aberrations of the world, his forty-seventh class, in his study on the twentieth floor of the Corbellum Building.

"Good morning, sir," he began with his winning smile. "I represent Saugger's patent letter clamps, solid German silver with an inlaid of sterling lead. Very simple—any baby can operate it. Many babies have, as I can prove by written testimonials. Only 1.75 apiece, sir, two for $1.80. How many, sir?"

Pinro X Jam, utterly oblivious of what the characters in his novel wrote on.

These letter stamps are in constant use by such celebrities as Quintus D. Lollers, Radcliffe Quaid, Munford Simpson, and Madame Vespoockle. They are merely pressing this lever, turning this screw, twisting this nut and bending this little wire, you see.

The novelist looked up at absent-mindedly and then his gaze brightened.

"Good!" he exclaimed. "You're an agent, a very common person. How does this novel strike you?"

And he quickly read "The Aberrations of the World," and was still reading when the agent, very weak, managed to crawl out of the study, leaving the patent letter stamps behind.

Whitewater News

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

When is violation of law a crime? When is it not a crime? These are the questions which will arise in connection with the "Jimmie Dale" series of two reels, each one a complete story, will be released weekly.

Moralists claim that it is the motive behind an action which makes it right or wrong. In the "Adventure" of "Jimmie Dale" stories the hero's motives are apparently criminal. He takes the wrong of others to heart and stops at nothing which will save a deserving human being a cruel injustice. He robs with his right hand to be able to do a deed of charity with his left.

In this story, it is the spirit of daring alone which prompts Jimmie Dale, the millionaire clubman, to crack the safe of a jewelry firm and take out a valuable pearl necklace. He just wanted to see if he was clever enough to open the safe and secure the jewels without being discovered, and intended to return the necklace the next morning.

He accomplishes his mission and leaves on the door of the safe his insignia—a grey seal—which as he indulges in one adventure after another becomes well known to the police as the mark of a very clever criminal.

Jimmie Dale is portrayed by E. K. Lincoln. Paul Panzer, Edna Hunter and Doris Mitchell also have important roles.

Mary Garden, noted operatic singer, makes her movie debut in a pictorialization of the opera "Thais." A referendum of movie patrons chose the subject. The producers had been considering the story of the opera "Salome."

Montague Love is a tragic fisherman in Kitty Gordon's new play, also the fisherman's avenging brother, a life-term convict and a detective in disguise. The play is called "Forget-Me-Not."

Thomas Stantisch is a great story teller. His dressing room is the favorite congregating place for the members of his company when not working.

Heinrich Holmes, daring railroad girl, is afraid of mice.

Francis X. Bushman says he'll enlist as soon as war is declared. He is the irresistible hero of "The Great Secret."

THE PLEASANTEST STREET.

The Pleasantest Street has its homes that are cheery.

And flowers and trim little trees all a-row.

On days that are sunny or days that are dreary.

It's smiling and happy as down it you go.

Its folks are all friendly and cheerfully give you.

And if you're observing and open the lids.

Of your eyes as you saunter the length of the street you.

Are sure to exclaim, "What a number of kids!"

A street may be broad and with gardens and roses.

And homes very costly and lawns very slick.

And yet as we stroll it we turn up our noses.

And think of the street where the youngsters are thick.

The street may be proud of its homes and the wealthy.

Yet never so proud as the Pleasantest Street.

That's home to the kids that are happy and healthy.

And echoes their laughter and pattering feet!

TODAY'S SNEER.

A good many people with big ideas have little else.

Tight.

"GARDEN OF ALLAH" WONDROUS SPECTACLE

Liebler Company's Production Shown At Myers Theatre, Saturday Matinee and Night, Most Spectacular Ever Shown in Janesville.

With true Sahara atmosphere, "The Garden of Allah," a dramatization of Robert Hichens' remarkable novel, played a matinee and evening engagement at Myers Theatre Saturday and proved to be the most remarkable spectacular drama ever shown in this city.

The opening curtain disclosed the desert just before dawn. Then a caravan of Arabs, Kabyles and Mozabites, with camels, horses, donkeys and goats passed by. And as the sun peeped over the eastern horizon, a shiek dismounted from his camel and goes through the fantastic rites of the Mohammedan. This scene was entitled "The Spirit of the Desert," and put the audience in the proper frame of mind for what is to come.

The play proper begins on the veranda of the Hotel de Desert. Hitherto has come beautiful Domini Enfield in quest of peace. To the same place has also come Boris Androvsky, a Trappist monk, in search of freedom and worldly happiness. Away in the distance stretches the desert—illimitable, misty, beckoning. And here Domini and Boris find in each other what each apparently has craved without knowing it.

From the desert the audience was taken to a street in Beni-Mora. Strange people passed to and from. There is music of the Arabian variety and street fighting. Then comes the interior of one of the houses on the street, where a motley group of Arabs are enjoying the wild and passionate dances of the native girls. Domini and Boris chance to wander into this house and again are mutually attracted.

Next comes the garden of Count Antoni, which, for sheer Oriental beauty surpasses anything ever put on any stage. Here the strange behavior of Boris puzzles the count, who cannot recall where or when they have met before. It is here that Boris forgets everything and tells Domini of his love for her.

Four months have passed when the next curtain rises, disclosing the famous sandstorm raging. A tent, picturesque in the extreme, tosses as the wind screeches and the sand whirls. Gradually the storm dies. Then Domini and Boris, now man and wife, are found spending their honeymoon on the desert. But what is Boris' moon on the desert? But what is Boris' moon on the desert? But what is Boris' moon on the desert?

Count Antoni and Father Houbler, who have become lost in the storm. And they bring from the unhappy Boris a confession of who he is. The desert at night is the next scene, with twinkling stars which gradually fade away as the dawn approaches and it is here that Boris confesses Domini with the true story of his past. Both then realize that they must renounce each other forever.

Next comes the Trappist monastery at El Laramie, at the foot of which Domini and Boris part and she goes to seek comfort and peace without him.

Sarah Truax, who was seen in the part of the bride, "Domini Enfield," visualized the part of the woman of this desert romance capitally, while her diction is delightfully distinct and her play in the long drawn out confession scene was impressive where she says never a word for several minutes.

William Jeffery gave a magnificent portrayal of the young monk, whose sweetness to worldly life and whose austere past he cleverly connotes. His powerful voice and plastic personality well befitted the role, and he reached the climax of his confession in the desert with fine dramatic fervor.

Howard Gould's portrayal of "Count Antoni," the desert dreamer, the confident man of the world, always surer of himself, was convincing.

Albert Abdruss depicted the character of the French priest of the colonies with accuracy. His "Father Rou-

Humming.

Human beings are the only creatures born with the ability to hum, except, of course, humming birds. Humming birds, however, have to hum for a living while the average human only hums at odd moments as a sort of relaxation. It seems probable that most men could not shave or tie their ties if they weren't able to hum a few bars while thus employed. Very often at such times you find that you are improvising pretty little snatches of song that the world should not willingly see die. You feel that if you had taken the time when younger you might have made a first rate composer. You try the thing over and it seems to want its first charm. Lots of little musical gems are lost to the world in this way. The man who does not hum or yodel while busy about the bathroom is as unnatural a creature as the woman who is not beguiled by a bargain.

The band boys have arranged a splendid evening's entertainment at a very popular price and they should have considerable support.

HUSKY DETROIT RECRUIT PITCHER WAS SOUTHPAW; BROKE ARM; USES RIGHT

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Detroit, March 26.—Pitcher Flannigan, a husky recruit, who is trying for a place with the Detroit Americans, Beloit boys, and hoped to retrieve their loss in the return games Saturday night. In every event, however, the visitors triumphed. Of the two basketball games, Janesville won one by a score of 12 to 3, losing the other, 7 to 11. In bowling, Beloit won both games, and also triumphed in pool, billiards, checkers, and chess.

Flannigan's injury brings to mind the accident which happened to Tris Speaker. He formerly was a right handed pitcher, but by the injury he learned to throw with his right arm and has had marked success ever since.

In a return tournament played at the local association between the members of the local H-Y-Y club and that organization from Beloit, the Line city boys were victors over Janesville by a point score of 80 to 10.

A few weeks ago the Janesville club journeyed to Beloit, where they were beaten in the various games by the Beloit boys, and hoped to retrieve their loss in the return games Saturday night. In every event, however, the visitors triumphed. Of the two basketball games, Janesville won one by a score of 12 to 3, losing the other, 7 to 11. ## BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

These pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dullness" and that lacy feeling come from constipation and a clogged liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "loggy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits. 10c and 25c a box. All druggists.

Resinol
itching skins

When you know physicians have prescribed Resinol for 25 years in the treatment of itching, burning, unsightly skin eruptions, and have written thousands of letters such as: "It is my regular prescription for itching," "Resinol has produced brilliant results," and "The result it gave was marvelous in one of the worst cases of eczema," don't it make you say to yourself, "that's the right kind of treatment for my skin trouble?"
Resinol is sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XX.

La Feria.

"What's this I hear about war?" Dolores inquired of her mistress, a few days after their arrival at La Feria. "They tell me that Mexico is invaded and that the American soldiers have already killed more than a thousand women and children."

"Who tells you this?" Alaire asked.

"The men—everybody," Dolores waved a hand in the direction of the other ranch buildings. "Our people are buzzing like bees with the news, and of course, no one cares to work when the Americans are coming."

"I shall have to put an end to such talk."

"This morning the word came that the revolution is ended and that the soldiers of both parties are uniting to fight for their liberties. They say the gringos are killing all the old people—everyone, in fact, except the girls, whom they take with them. Already they have begun the most horrible practices. Why, at Espinal—" Dolores eyes were round—"would you believe it?—those Yankee soldiers are a baby! They roasted the little dear like a cabrito and ate it! I tell you, it makes me talk among the peluderos."

"Do you believe such stories?" Alaire inquired, with some amusement.

"I'm not altogether sure. But all the same, I think it is time we were going home."

"This is home, for me, Dolores."

"Yes, but now that war—"

"There isn't any war, and there won't be any. However, if you are nervous I'll send you back to Las Palmas at once."

"Glory of God! It would be the end of me. These Mexicans would recognize me instantly as an American, for I have the appearance and the culture. You can imagine what would happen to me. They would tear me from the train. It was nothing except General Longorio's soldiers that brought us safely through from Nuevo Pineda."

"Then I'm glad that he insisted upon sending them with us. Now tell me—"

"What's This I Hear About War?"

ranch-hands to put no faith in these ridiculous stories. If they wish the truth let them ask General Longorio; he will be here today and quiet their fears."

"You think he intends to pay us for our cattle?"

"Yes."

Dolores pondered a moment. "Well, perhaps he does—it is not his money. For that matter, he would give all Mexico if you asked it. Tse! His love consumes him like a fever."

Alaire stirred uneasily; then she rose and went to an open window, which looked out into the tiny patio with its trickling fountain and its rank, untended plants. "Why do you insist that he loves me?" she asked. "All Mexicans are gallant and pay absurd compliments. It's just a way they have. He has never spoken a word that could give offense." As Dolores said nothing, she went on, hesitatingly, "I can't very well refuse to see him, for I don't possess even a receipt to show that he took those cattle."

"Oh, you must not offend him," Dolores agreed, hastily. "or we'd never leave Mexico alive." With which cheering announcement the housekeeper heaved a deep sigh and went about her duties with a gloomy face.

Longorio arrived that afternoon, and Alaire received him in the great naked living room of the hacienda, with her best attempt at formality. But her coolness served not in the least to chill his fervor.

"Senora," he cried, eagerly, "I have a thousand things to tell you, things of the greatest importance. They have been upon my tongue for hours, but now that I behold you I grow drunk with delight and my lips frame nothing but words of admiration for your beauty. So, I feast my eyes." He retained his warm clasp of her fingers, seeming to envelop her uncomfortably with his ardor.

"What is it you have to tell me?" she asked him, withdrawing her hand.

"Well, I hardly know where to begin—events have moved so swiftly, and such incredible things have happened. Even now I am in a daze, for history is being made every hour—history for Mexico, for you, and for me. I bring you good news and bad news; something to startle you and set your brain in a whirl. I planned to send a messenger ahead of me, and then I said: 'No, this is a crisis; therefore no tongue but mine shall apprise her, no hand but mine shall comfort her. Only a coward shrinks from the unpleasant; I shall lighten her distress and awaken in her breast new hope, new happiness.'"

"What do you mean?" Alaire inquired, sharply. "You say you bring bad news?"

The general nodded. "In a way, terrible, shocking. And yet I look beyond the immediate and see in it a blessing. So must you. To me it spells the promise of my unspoken longings, my whispered prayers. Nothing his hearer's growing bewilderment, he laid a hand familiarly upon her arm. "No matter how I tell you, it will be a blow, for death is always sudden; it always finds us unprepared."

"Death? Who is dead?"

"Restrain yourself. Allow for my clumsiness."

"Who? Please tell me!"

"Someone very close to you and very dear to you at one time. My knowledge of your long unhappiness alone gives me courage to speak."

Alaire raised her fluttering fingers to her throat; her eyes were wide as she said: "You don't mean—Mr. Austin?"

"Yes," Longorio scrutinized her closely, as if to measure the effect of his disclosure. "Senora, you are free!"

Alaire uttered a breathless exclamation; then, feeling his gaze burning into her, turned away, but not before he had noted her sudden pallor, the blanching of her lips.

"This unexpected announcement dazed her; it scattered her thoughts and robbed her of words, but just what her dominant emotion was at the moment she could not tell. Once her first giddiness had passed, however, once the truth had borne in upon her, she found that she felt no keen anguish, and certainly no impulse to weep. Rather she experienced a vague horror, such as the death of an acquaintance or of a familiar relative might evoke. Ed had been anything but a true husband, and her feeling now was more for the memory of the man he had been, for the boy she had known and loved, than for the man whose name she bore.

So he was gone and, Longorio said, she was free. It meant much. She realized dimly that in this one moment her whole life had changed. She had never thought of this way out of her embarrassments; she had been prepared, in fact, for anything except this. Death! It was deplorable, for Ed was young. Once the first shock had passed away, she became conscious of a deep pity for the man, and a complete forgiveness for the misery he had caused her. After a time she faced the news-bearer, and in a strained voice inquired:

"How did it happen? Was it—because of me?"

"No, no! Rest your mind on that score. See! I understand your concern and I share your intimate thoughts. No, it was an accident, ordained by God. His end was the result of his own folly, a gunshot wound while he was drunk. I believe. Now you will understand why I said that I bore tidings both good and evil, and why I, of all people, should be the one to impart them."

"Death? Who is dead?"

Alaire turned questioning eyes upon him, as if to fathom his meaning, and he answered her with his brilliant smile, failing to evoke a response, he went on:

"Ever since I heard of it I have repeated over and over again, 'It is a miracle; it is the will of God.' Come, then, we know each other so well that we may speak frankly. Let us be honest and pretend to no counterfeit emotions. Let us recognize in this only your deliverance and the certainty of that blessed happiness which divine providence offers us both."

"Both?" she repeated, dully.

"Need I be plain? You know my heart. You have read me. You understand how I have throttled my longings and remained mute while all my being called to you."

Alaire withdrew a step, and her cheeks colored with anger. "General!" she exclaimed, with some difficulty. "I am amazed. This is no time—"

Her indignation rose with the sound of her own voice, causing her to stammer.

Taking advantage of her loss of words, he hurried on: "You must pardon my impetuosity, but I am a man of tremendous force, and my life moves swiftly. I am not shackled by conventions—they are less than nothing to me. It seems to you that my eagerness carries me away, remember that war is upon us and that affairs of moment press me so that I am compelled to move like the lightning. With me, senora, a day is a year. The past is gone, the present is here, the future rushes forward to meet us."

"Indeed, you forget yourself," she said, warmly. Then, changing her tone: "I too must act quickly. I must go back at once."

"Oh, but I have told you only a part of what I came to say."

"Surely the rest can wait." Her voice was vibrant with contempt. "I'm in no condition to listen to anything else."

But Longorio insisted. "Wait! It is impossible for you to leave here."

Alaire stared at him incredulously.

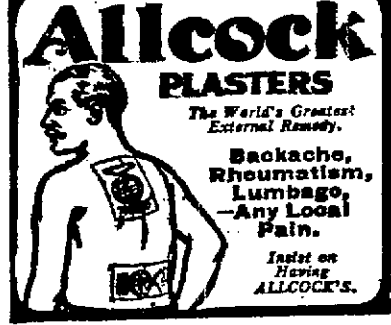

"It is true. Mexico is a seething caldron of hate; the country is convulsed. It would be unsafe for you."

"Do you mean to say that war has been declared?"

"Practically."

"What—? You are telling me the truth?" A moment, then Alaire continued, more calmly, "If that is so, there is all the more reason why I should lose no time."

"Listen!" The general was deeply in earnest. "You have no conception of the chaos out there." He waved a comprehensive gesture. "If the explosion has not come, it will come within a few hours. That is why I flew to your side. Battleships are hurrying toward our coast, troops are massing against our border, and Mexico has risen like one man. The people are in a frenzy; they are out of bounds; there is sack and pillage in the cities. Americans are objects of violence everywhere and the peons are frantic." He paused impressively. "We face the greatest upheaval of history."

"Then why are you here?" Alaire demanded. "This is no place for you at such a moment."

Dinner Stories

There is an old negro living in Memphis who was taken ill several days ago and called a physician of his race to prescribe for him. But the old man did not seem to be getting any better, and finally a white physician was called. Soon after arriving, he felt the negro's pulse for a moment, and then examined his tongue.

"Did your other doctor take your temperature?" he asked his patient, kindly.

"I don't know, sah," he answered, feebly. "I hadn't misself anything but my watch as yit, boss."

A girl in Philadelphia, who had recently figured in a romantic runaway match, was, after her return home, telling her dearest friend all about it.

The latter interrupted with this question: "When you eloped with Louis did you leave a note telling your folks where you had gone?"

"Why, of course," said the wife. "If I hadn't, how on earth would papa have known where to send us any money?"

"Excuse me sir," the waiter reminded him. "The amount put down in the bill does not include the waiter."

"Why should it?" growled the diner. "I didn't eat a waiter."

Bessie was attending her first class in domestic science and was asked to tell briefly the surest way to keep milk from souring. Bessie, who was an exceedingly practical child, gave this recipe:

"Leave it in the cow."

JAPAN HOPES TO SOLVE EMIGRATION PROBLEM BY MODEL FARM IN U. S. A.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

Tokio, March 26.—With the hope that it will be an aid in solving the immigration problem between the United States and Japan, a new plan of educating Japanese emigrants in a model farm colony near Seattle, Washington, will be started here next Monday. Beginning then a group of Japanese will be sent every year to work on the model colony acres.

These emigrants will be graduates of the Kanagawa Middle School, a private institution of which Mr. Sumi-wu Hattori is principal. He is the eldest son of the late Ayawo Hattori, who worked for friendship between Japan and America until his death in the United States several years ago.

He held the opinion that the best way to unravel the immigration tangle between the two countries was to raise the standard of Japanese in the United States. He died before he could realize this idea, which has now been taken up by his son, the principal of the Middle School.

The land near Seattle where these educated emigrants will work was bought for this purpose through the efforts of Masajiro Furuya, a prominent Japanese merchant in the Washington city.

The Japanese government, which enforces the gentlemen's agreement with the United States, has not yet officially approved the plan, but it is not expected to meet with objection if the emigrants are really educated.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS GET 2000 CHEAP LUNCHEONS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Green Bay, Wis., March 26.—Students in the West High school have been provided with two thousand lunches during the past winter at the average cost of from seven to ten cents a person.

The menu consisted of ham, peanuts, eggs and plain sandwiches, baked beans, scalloped corn, potatoes, macaroni, cheese, bread pudding, tapioca and baked apples.

ENGLISH FARMER WOULD POISON WHEAT TO KILL BIRDS.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

London, March 26.—Farmers have appealed to the government to allow them to use poisoned wheat to destroy the sparrow pest. Fifty years ago the farmers were free to combat the sparrow with poisoned wheat but the practice is now forbidden by law. The theory was that game or all sorts might eat the poison intended for the sparrows. The farmers ask that they be allowed to use the poison only during December, January and February when these birds swarm to their lairs in search of food.

FRENCH REPUBLIC PROVIDES MUCH WINE TO SOLDIERS.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

Paris, March 26.—In the year 1915 the French government distributed 618,000,000 bottles of wine among the armies, each man and officer receiving half a liter a day. Last year there was a considerable increase, the total amount requisitioned reaching 799,000,000 bottles.

Women of Middle Age

Many distressing Ailments experienced by them are Alleviated by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Here is Proof by Women who Know.

Lowell, Mass.—"For the last three years I have been troubled with the Change of Life and the bad feelings common at that time. I was in a very nervous condition, with headaches and pain a good deal of the time so I was unfit to do my work. A friend asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and it has helped me in every way. I am not nearly so nervous, no headache or pain. I must say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best remedy any sick woman can take."—Mrs. MARGARET QUINN, Rear 289 Worthen St., Lowell, Mass.

She Tells Her Friends to Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies.

North Haven, Conn.—"When I was 45 I had the Change of Life which is a trouble all women have. At first it didn't bother me but after a while I got bearing down pains. I called in doctors who told me to try different things but they did not cure my pains. One day my husband came home and said, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash?' Well, I got them and took about 10 bottles of Vegetable Compound and could feel myself regaining my health. I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and it has done me a great deal of good. Any one coming to my house who suffers from female troubles or Change of Life, I tell them to take the Pinkham remedies. There are about 20 of us here who think the world of them."—Mrs. FLORENCE LESLIE, Box 197, North Haven, Conn.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I read that article by "Old Man Experience" and think he is not talking of a certain class of girls no better than himself. I often think that if women only had the backbone to stand up for light and right, they would be a great deal better off.

I think the standard of men would be raised, too. I am what "Old Man Experience" styles an old maid—not because I never had a chance, but I think it is better to be an old maid than to be a woman who is unfortunately married.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I would like to have you tell me how to gain more girl and boy friends, but have hardly any. I dress nicely, but yet not too much so. I am twenty-two years old, stay at home and help my mother. I never have worked out, except for about nine weeks and that was just three weeks at a time for the last three years at Christmas time. I had to quit school when in the sixth grade. I do not have time to read much. I enjoy going to church and Epworth League parties. My brothers call me religious crazy. They do not go to church and think that is why they make fun of me.

DOWN HEARTED GIRL.

We have time to do the things we want to do. If you wanted to read as much as you want to do other things you could find the time if you did not read you would probably be more interesting to other people. I think it would be well to take up study in a night school. Then you would meet people and would have a new interest. Perhaps you do give church too much of your time and interest. It isn't easy to be jolly and popular. I can only advise you to try to take an interest in the things you think are interesting to others.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I think your advice is good. Girls who model their characters between the ages of sixteen and twenty are not likely to change. It is between these ages that we all need the most advice. I especially approve of your views on kissing.

I speak from personal experience. When a girl of nineteen I had eleven of the cleanest, finest young gentlemen for friends that a girl could have. They were always trying to do some kind of thing for me and to give me an unexpected pleasure. Up to the time I became engaged not one of the boys ever so much as attempted to hold my hand or kiss me. In the first place they knew I would not allow it and in the second place they were gentlemen.

I have been married two years. Some people say that unless girls let boys kiss they will not be married. Their theory is unsound. I am not an exception. All my girl friends have had the same experience.

Of course girls who do not let a boy kiss until they are engaged, marry.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a high school girl aged nineteen. I have been going with a boy who is two years older. I have been going with him nearly two months. He never asks to take me to church, but always takes me home with him. What should I do in a case like this? I hate to ask him to take me places.

ANNIE.

The boy should certainly take you places. But you cannot ask him to go with him to church if you were you. Anyone who is so thoughtless would always make an unsatisfactory friend. When he asks to take you home tell him that you have made other arrangements.

Household Hints

ORANGE MARMALADE.

This orange marmalade is not bitter, strong nor dark. Select four large sweet oranges and two seedless lemons. Scrub them with a vegetable brush in warm water, then quarter them, cut out the bitter part and cut out the seeds (crosswise with a skinner) about one-fourth inch wide, pulp and rind.

Measure fruit and add three cups cold water to each cup of fruit. Put in a crock, cover closely and let stand over night. In the morning put on fire and let boil uncovered till rind is tender.

Next morning measure three-fourths cup sugar to each cup juice and boil till it jells.

Never cook but six cups of juice at one time if you want it light colored and not strong.

Let the juice boil twenty minutes before putting in the sugar. Sugar is added in a few minutes after sugar is added. This never fails.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES.

Cold in the Head may be cured by taking one ounce each of fine table salt, borax and camphor, mix thoroughly and use as a snuff. It should be used every three or four hours till cold is relieved.

To Amuse the Children and at the same time prepare a valuable household remedy, get three cents' worth of more of lump alum and let the children burn it by placing the lumps on top of cook stove. After the lumps are melted, add one cup of water and continue boiling a long time according to amount used in one place.

When almost dry it will go up and down, performing queer antics. Like some living thing, much to the amusement of children. Do not stir it, but when dry on one side turn over and let it remain a while longer. After it is dry and white, pulverize fine and put away for future use. It is a fine remedy for gangrenous sore mouth or throat, for burning out proud flesh, for clearing the eyes of horses that have sore and weak eyes. Also use to stop a coughing cough; also use to stop a coughing cough; also use to stop a coughing cough.

THE TABLE.

Pork Pie—Purchase two and one-half pounds fresh pork shoulder and roll; when about half done put in three or four medium-sized potatoes. When all are done, take out meat and potatoes to cool. Make a rich brown crust, line bottom and sides of deep dish, put in meat and potatoes in layers of meat, fat and layer of potatoes cut fine, with salt and pepper. Continue until crust is filled to top. Roll out piece of dough big enough for top and cut hole in middle size of half dollar; cover pie. Bake a nice brown. When done pour in the meat was cooked in. By pouring juice in last through the center hole you have a nice brown bottom crust instead of a soggy crust. Will serve four people.

Celery Patties—Wash celery and cut into half-inch pieces; boil until tender, drain, add two tablespoons butter, season with salt and pepper, then put in patty shells and put in brisk oven for five minutes. When ready, add sauce made of half cup celery water, one cup milk, three tablespoons each of butter and flour. Add salt to taste and serve hot.

One Crust—Apple Pie—One cup flour, three-fourths teaspoon salt, one-fourth cup lard, about one-fourth cup cold water, tart apples, sugar, cinnamon or nutmeg. Sift salt and flour into mixing bowl, cut in the lard with knife, then add the cold water slowly until the whole mass can be taken upon the knife without crumbling. Peel and slice apples, place them in pie plate greased with lard, sprinkle with sugar. Quantity to be used depends upon tartness of apples; add seasoning and dot with one teaspoon butter. Roll dough out on floured board, cut and place over the apples; press edge with finger, fork, and trim. Then prick crust with fork to allow steam to escape. Bake in medium-hot oven until apples are tender and crust browned. When serving, cut with knife; lay crust on plate upside down, heap the apples on it and dust with powdered sugar.

Sandwich Pudding—One and one-half cups flour, one cup sugar, one egg, butter size of egg, one-half cup milk, one teaspoon cream of tartar, one-half teaspoon soda. Have custard pudding dish lined half full of sliced apples and pour batter over them. Bake one hour. To be eaten with meat sauce.

The Care of the Baby's Eyes

By Mrs. Max West.

(Of The Federal Children's Bureau)
Written for The Gazette.

A large part of the blindness among children is needless, because the cause is well known and the remedy at hand. Many states now require that the simple treatment described below shall be used in every case, and it would do much to save children from this incalculable calamity if mothers throughout the world understood the means of prevention.

At the moment of birth the baby's eyes are to be wiped with bits of sterile cotton, using a separate piece for each eye and wiping from the nose outward. Following this the eyes are to be treated with an antiseptic which is to be dropped into each eye, first lifting the lid in order to get the medicine properly into the eye.

This very simple and inexpensive treatment is sufficient in many cases to prevent the development of the disease of the eyes of new born children which leads to blindness. But if treatment has been neglected and symptoms of the disease appears, such as reddened and swollen lids the mother should insist upon having the doctor begin the treatment at once, for if neglected, even for twenty-four hours, it may be too late to save the sight.

It is best to send the baby to a hospital for treatment, if the eyes are badly inflamed and discharging pus, as only the most constant and careful treatment will save them, and even then it may not be successful.

Side Talks

BLANK WALL PEOPLE.

"I told him I should go crazy if I had to have that woman in the house all the time," said my neighbor. "That woman" was an accompanist whom her husband had wanted her to have to take the care off her shoulders for a few months.

"She always seemed very pleasant to me," I ventured to say. "That's because you've never lived with her," said my neighbor. "I've had her before, you know. Not that she isn't pleasant enough. That isn't what I mean. But she's one of those dreadful people that make you feel like you're talking to a blank wall because they never listen to what you say."

"For instance?" I suggested. "She wasn't listening at all. Well, she wasn't here here since the day she hadn't been here since she came to help me out when mother was sick and she asked how mother was and I started telling her, but she couldn't tell right off she wasn't listening and in a minute she broke out, 'Had that davenport covered, haven't you?'"

"Then she asked how old the children were now and before I could an-falls heavily upon the household where there is no intelligent direction of the food supply. Expensive high proteid foods, such as beef and pork, impose a heavy burden upon the liver and kidneys. They are not as nutritious as cereals and fruits. Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits with milk supply all the nutriment needed for a half day's work at a cost of only four or five cents. Cut out meat and eggs, eat Shredded Wheat Biscuit with green vegetables and fruits, and see how much better you feel. For breakfast with hot milk or cream. Made at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

The High Cost of Indigestible Food

swear, that blank look came over her face and I saw she was looking at the place where we used to have the piano,—we've moved it into the hall. That's the way she is all the time. Perhaps I'm foolish to mind it but it makes me dreadfully nervous."

A Great Many of Us Are Foolish That Way.

Perhaps she is foolish to mind, but I'm afraid a great many of us are foolish too.

In a country town where I used to visit there was a woman whose sitting room window commanded a view of the main street. Everything that went on she saw. If you were talking with her when anyone passed down that street a blank book would come over her face and conversation would be suspended until she had decided what his or her errand was. Naturally people did not greatly enjoy these conversations.

It Doesn't Seem Possible And Yet "The Goldfish" has also met this type of person. He concludes a protest against them with the following incident which seems a trifle exaggerated, but you never can tell.

"I know a woman," he writes, "who never pays the slightest attention to anything that is being said to her, being engrossed in a torrent of explanations regarding her children's education and various diseases. One day a bored companion in a momentary pause fixed her sternly in the eye and said distinctly, 'But I don't give a D— about your children.'"

"At which the lady smiled brightly and replied, 'Yes, quite so. Exactly and replied, 'Yes, quite so. Exactly. As I was saying Johnny got a—"

THE GOLDEN EAGLE

LEVY'S

Stetson

EVERY hour throngs of men and young men stop in front of our windows to see those engaging new Stetsons.

Then they come in to buy—scores of them. One of our customers said he had intended wearing his last year's selection in spite of the way hats were going; but one of the Stetson's in our window "got him."

And then he picked out two for us to send home.

Come in and try on several of them. We'll not be disappointed if you are not ready to buy.

Price $4.00 and $5.00.

THE HIGHFLIERS

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD
Squelching Her Mother-in-Law is Grim Work to Mollie and Not a Subject For Idle Jest.

Mollie sat with her little son lying across her knee as Clyde opened the nursery door. She looked up with a welcoming smile and he walked over to the low chair and laid his head carelessly on the brown head.

"Little mother," he murmured, "I'm hungry."

"If I don't that, you do not understand," said Mollie. "You laughed. It was so funny. I made mother angry by laughing at her and now you are hurt. It doesn't beat the cars! Women have no sense of humor."

"Here, son, you go into your basket. I have a job of spanging out this hurt." He laid the baby gently down and gathered Mollie up in his arms and sat down in a big chair with her.

"Now it is all right, isn't it? I am just a big, awkward brute, and I bugled things badly, but you know I am not proud of you. I want you to be able to stand up for yourself when I am not here to stand up for you, and it does me good to know you can." He kissed the tears from the wet eyes and rocked her in silence.

"Now the puffed feathers are all right on my little dove," he asked as she sat up and smiled faintly. "I told mother that she had better come between four and half-past five, for that was the time the young king had audience." Claude smiled a little, but that was all.

"We do not want our little evening together," began Mollie, but stopped.

"Oh, she will not come every night, of course, and I thought I could—"

he was going to say, "refuse the scrap, but he stopped in time. 'The baby is always awake at that time,' he added lamely.

"That is the time when we are all together that's all," Mollie said to the door and went and got the baby. "Don't you want to hold all the family?" she asked, coming back to his side. He opened his arms and held the baby close around all that he held in the world. "It would be a shame to have this intimate little family party broken up, that is a fact," he murmured as the twilight fell and the leaves of the maple outside the window were stirred by the birds dropping early to their nests.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO DR. BRADY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

A STUDENT'S BILL OF FARE.

A young man in college wishes to maintain an active and yet maintain normal nutrition. What should be his bill of fare? Can he feed himself properly at a cost of not over $3.00 a week?

He should have meat three times a week. He should give canned goods a wide berth. He should include in his bill of fare a good deal of bread, healthful cereals, fruit and a sample menu for such a student:

Breakfast.

Home cooked oatmeal, ample portion, with brown sugar and cream.

Two slices of toast, or of brown bread.

One cup of unadorned coffee, with sugar and cream.

A dish of stewed prunes, or two or three figs, or an apple.

Lunch.

Home cooked vegetable soup, thickened with milk.

Bread and oleomargarine. Or crackers.

Baked apple, rhubarb, apple sauce, or any fresh fruit.

Chase of coffee and glass of milk.

Dinner.

Roast beef with brown gravy, or broiled chicken, or broiled fish, or creamed codfish, or codfish balls.

Potatoes, baked (skins should be eaten).

Any fresh or green vegetable. Raw cabbage, celery or greens by preference, in season.

Bread and butter. Or oatmeal, crackers, or bran gems. Or corn meal cakes.

Fruit, rice pudding or a slab of home-made pie.

If the student studies late at night, he should make it a rule to get out to a run around the block before retiring. When he comes in from his
